What is PDRN?

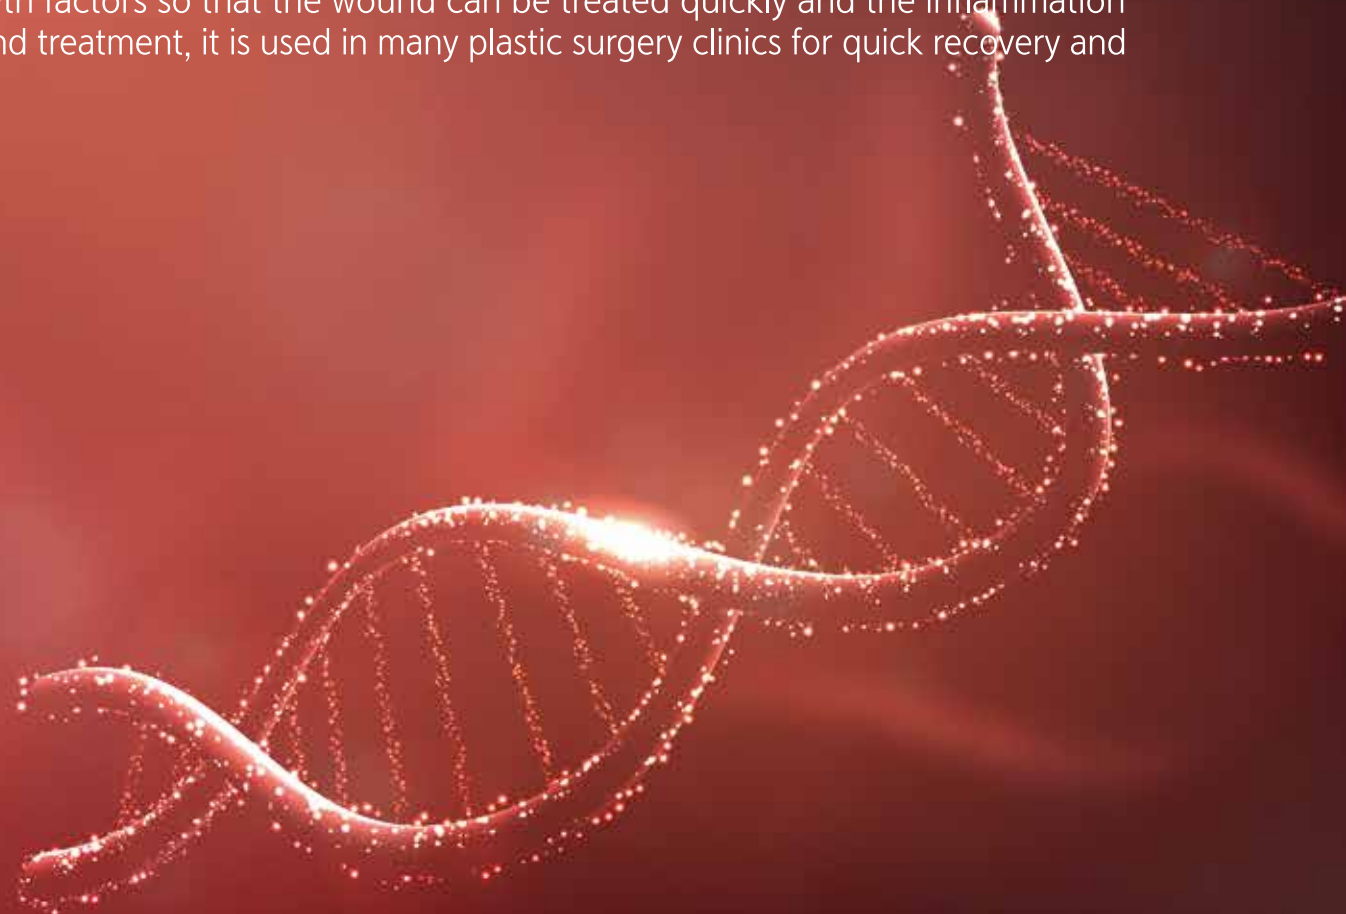

It is a naturally derived substance extracted from salmon's DNA, so it has very high homeostasis and stability.

So why extract PDRN from salmon?

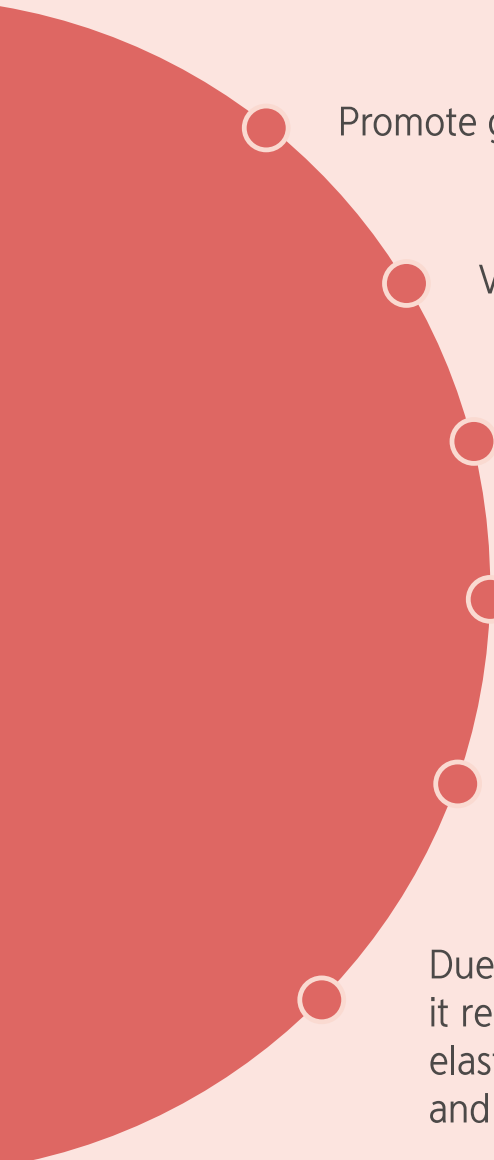

This is because salmon have the most similar DNA base ratio to humans, so there are no viruses that can be common to humans and animals.

At this time, PDRN is extracted from salmon germ cells, where there are few fat, protein, and cellular organs, so there are few impurities and good yield when extracting DNA.

It helps tissue regeneration and stimulates growth factors so that the wound can be treated quickly and the inflammation can be alleviated. As PDRN is excellent as a wound treatment, it is used in many plastic surgery clinics for quick recovery and removal of scars after surgery.

Effectiveness of PRDN | effect is obtained through Adenosine a2 receptor stimulation.

- Promote growth factor production
 - VEGF → Improve microcirculation and blood circulation
 - Induction of fibrous differentiation
 - Reduction of inflammation

○ The generated growth factors contribute to the differentiation and growth of fibroblasts, promote the production of collagen and extracellular matrix (ECM), and regenerate tissues by causing the differentiation of capillaries

○ Due to its excellent skin regeneration ability when stimulating adenosine A2a receptors in the skin, it restores oil balance and improves sebum secretion and improves skin texture by replenishing elastic fibers that have been reduced due to balance recovery and aging. It improves skin wrinkles and increases the overall ratio of new cells to help whitening
